Bataan and Corregidor . . . Bitter Memory of Heroic Men Still Glows After Full Year

One year ago today a bitter fight was nearing its end at two places that are forever enshrined in the hearts of Americans—Bataan and Corregidor.

Just to keep that heroic memory bright, let's look back a year and recall those days:

April 8, 1942—Of the situation on Bataan the War Department said: "Fresh Japanese troops are continuing their forward drive with great vigor. A heavy attack on our new positions is now in progress. Dive-bombers and attack aircraft are bombing and machine-gunning our front lines. Heavy bombers are continuing their attacks on our rear areas near the southern extremity of the peninsula. The present Japanese attack is the longest sustained drive of the enemy since operations began. Waves of shock troops have attacked almost continuously, without regard to casualties, which have been heavy on both sides."

April 12—Washington reported Japanese planes had raided Corregidor 12 times during the past 14 hours.

April 13—Thirteen American bombing planes under command of Brig. Gen. Ralph Royce, which left Australia April 11, covered 2000 miles over the Pacific and made, on April 13-14, a two-day attack in the Philippines on Japanese occupied places.

Losses Estimated
Washington said "there were 10 Japanese raids on Corregidor during the last 24 hours."

April 15—The Japanese continued their artillery attack on Corregidor.

April 17—The War Department estimated that "approximately 35,000 American and Filipino combatant troops, several thousand non-combatant, and supply troops and 25,000 civilians are in Bataan, and presumably in the hands of the enemy." In addition, there were on Bataan on April 9, 5536 sick and wounded patients in the various general hospitals.

Doolittle Over Tokyo
"A relatively small number of troops and Army nurses, totaling 88, were evacuated to Corregidor from Bataan on April 9."

April 18—In fair weather, in the middle of the day, flying at low altitude, a squadron of American planes led by Brig. Gen. James H. Doolittle, and accompanied by 79 other flyers raided the Japanese mainland, including Tokyo. In the Navy yard south of Tokyo a new cruiser or battleship under construction was bombed and left in flames. "Along the coast line," said Gen Doolittle when he was decorated by President Roosevelt, "we observed several squadrons of destroyers and some cruisers and battleships. About 25 miles to sea the rear gunners reported seeing columns of smoke rising thousands of feet into the sky. One of our bombardiers strewn incendiary bombs along a quarter of a mile of aircraft factory near Nagoya. Another illuminated a tank farm."

War Prisoners Disclosed
"However, flying at such low altitudes made it very difficult to observe the result following the impact of the bombs. We could see the strike but our field of vision was greatly restricted by the speed of the plane and the low altitude at which we were flying. Even so, one of our party observed a ball game in progress. The players and spectators did not start their run for cover until just as the field passed from sight. It appeared to us that practically every bomb reached the target for which it was intended." The raid extended to Kobe, Nagoya and Yokohama.

There was no mention at that time that any of the flyers had fallen into the hands of the Japanese but six months later, in October, a Tokyo broadcast named four of the flyers whom they were still holding as war prisoners. It was that the War Department disclosed that several of the Doolittle squadron had never returned.

Corregidor Falls
April 19—Amid bursting shells three American soldiers on Corregidor repaired and re-hoisted Old Glory which a chance shot from a Japanese cannon on Bataan had torn from the flagpole of the fortress on the highest point of the island.

April 27—Corregidor experienced its 250th air raid.

May 6—After six days of ceaseless cannonading, the fortress was surrendered at 11 p. m. by Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright and the next day the Japanese completed occupation of the battered island.

Egerer Named On All-League

Ed Egerer, Torrance forward, was named on the All-Marine League basketball team this week along with three stars of Banning's championship quintet and Roy Pederson of San Pedro.
